FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

In December, our fund was up +2.74% and the net asset value (NAV) per share closed at 98.39. This month stock markets were positive across the globe. In U.S. Fed finally, in their last meeting of 2016, increased the overnight interest rate by 0.25%, as widely expected by the market. Yet, the dovish tone of the Fed and their estimate to raise the rate three times in 2017 were a slightly positive surprise, while it was mentioned that final decisions will be data dependent. This news made USD surged to a 14 year high. Both S&P500 and Dow Jones Industrial Average were up more than 3%, whereas Russell 2000 surged more than 5%. The five major U.S. equity indices recorded the highest levels after almost 20 years. In the other side, treasuries experienced sell-off sessions and the yield for the first time hit nearly 2.5%, as a result of uncertainty over the interest rate rise. In 2016 small caps outperformed large caps which shows investors' confidence in global economy's growth. International stocks have been negatively affected as a result of USD strength. The OPEC announcement over the supply cut, led by Saudi's support for production cut, helped energy prices to boost and make Emerging Market stocks rally. In Europe, "No" vote of the Italian referendum made investors, once more, to be concerned about the future of the European Union. However, markets absorbed this news very rapidly, which shows that investors learnt their lesson in 2016, to not be oversensitive to political news but rather be focused on actual economic and financial data.

In 2017, European countries are likely to face some political unrest, and global central banks divergence will become more apparent as in U.S. Fed will increase the rate while ECB, BoJ and BoE will become more accommodative on their asset purchase program.

We have re-balanced our portfolio in order to adjust to the new economic and fundamental environment. We are underweight emerging market equities and bonds, and we are market-weight U.S. equities, especially blue-chip large caps. We are underweight European equities, while we took some profit from Japanese small-cap as well as Topix, in order to benefiting from JPY movements. We are market weight European bonds, as a result of ECB last statement on its extended quantitative easing program. Our portfolio is strategically balanced between bonds and equities and cash for the start of 2017, till we start to receive the new signals about world economy.
