

ARCHEA FUND Patrimoine

BELLATRIX

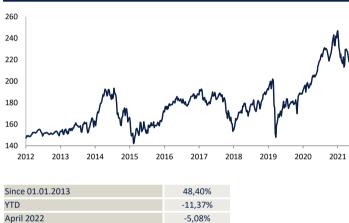

During April the fund decreased by 5.07% and its value decline to EUR 218.09.

European stock markets posted negative performances for the month of April, worried about very high inflation figures, slowing of the global growth and the war in Ukraine. The Federal Reserve's intentions to tighten the monetary policy did not reassure investors.

Europe - The PMI indices for April came out much better than expected. While a slowdown of activity in Europe was feared, it seems to be supported by the lifting of most of the sanitary constraints and by the replenishment of stocks to cover possible shortages or in anticipation of higher prices. The start of the earnings season has supported the equity markets, with companies being rather reassuring about the performance of consumption at this time. Regarding macroeconomic figures, the publication of the consumer confidence index has reassured investors somewhat, but analysts are still tending to revise the European growth downwards. In this regard, we can refer to the revision made by the IMF on its growth forecasts in Europe to 2.8%. For the first quarter, LVMH and Kering have published a turnover above expectations, however, the growth of Gucci sales has disappointed due in particular to the closure of stores in China.

United States - Jerome Powell confirmed the Fed's willingness to move quickly towards a normalization of monetary policy, deeming likely several 50bp rate hikes likely. James Bullard, President of the St. Louis Fed, mentioned the possibility of a 75bp rate hike. On the earnings front, Amazon and Alphabet disappointed with their first quarter earnings releases. Apple, Microsoft and Meta Platforms have published positive quarterly figures.
