FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTS

During the month of May, the fund decreased by 4.47% to EUR 208.32.

The European stock markets posted negative performances in May, against a backdrop of heightened fears of slowing growth in the developed countries. Rising commodity prices and the resulting inflationary pressures are weighing on consumer purchasing power and corporate margins.

Europe - In the European Central Bank will end its quantitative easing this summer. The buyback program will end and a rate hike could be on the horizon by July. However, the pace of rate hikes will be less aggressive than in other developed countries, which in our view limits the upside potential for the euro. On the corporate side, L'Oréal announced the completion of the acquisition of Byredo perfumes for 1 billion euros. Luxury goods stocks such as LVMH were penalized by the disappointing results of Richemont.

United States - Retail companies were particularly affected by the results of Walmart and Target, which disappointed investors, both in terms of consumer behavior and margin trends. Fears of a recession resurfaced as government bond rates stabilized or even fell slightly. It had been several weeks since bonds had played their role as a safe haven. Economic data releases, including leading indicators such as the Empire Manufacturing and Philadelphia Business Outlook, came in below expectations and at low absolute levels, pointing to future weakness in the U.S. economy. However, the interventions of central bankers remain in a restrictive tone. Indeed, Jerome Powell reaffirmed the Fed's willingness to raise interest rates as much as necessary to contain inflation, which could penalize growth.
